

DAISY: Get Writing Micro-podcast: Week 3 - After a flood

Flood plains are incredibly fertile places. In Botswana's Okavango Delta in southern Africa, as in many other deltas, the natural world comes back to life after floods. The delta turns the desert around it green. Birds, insects, great herds of animals return.

So research the Okavango as if you have been asked to be a witness to the regrowth of this landscape.

Imagine you're a bird returning to the Okavango and you have an aerial view. Describe the colours, sounds, the shapes and movement you see, as in photos of the earth from the air which often look abstract.

And now zoom into one particular creature and show how it's responding to this renewed landscape. Enjoy your travels.