

DAiSY Get Writing Micro-podcast: Week 10 - Writing your own anthem

Hello again, it's Jackie Wills. This week you're writing an anthem. Think about time you set aside to do something creative.

It might be drawing, sewing, music, gardening, baking, dancing, mending a bike or car, building a wall. So much of what we do as humans is creative.

Write about what time of day or night it is and describe the environment you're in. Are you alone? If you are, remember advice you've been given about how to do this task.

Did someone show you how to mend a tyre? Perhaps you've watched a Youtube video on how to knit or bake a loaf, how to hold drumsticks or plant seeds. Include a phrase you found useful.

Now imagine someone else doing the same thing and talking as they're doing it. You're in the background now, watching and listening. You've handed the task over to them.

Bring this character to life. What do they do? Where do they go? Make this person shine as a result of the creative task they've immersed themselves in.
